

Children with special needs: Efficient Approximations

In the last two advanced children seminars, we explored how to work with a child in possible, comfortable postures in which he can feel and do an action which relates to a specific function. Mainly we addressed basic functions like balance, using the support of a floor for pushing in order to advance or in order to balance, falling etc. We could see the important role of Approximations tailored creatively for each child and at each moment. In the present seminar we will learn how to make the approximation really relevant for the child. what are the means to ensure that also the child himself feels it as an approximation of the addressed function.

Organization of the seminar: Schedule:

- Each day will start with an ATM for practitioners and parents
- Then, an FI demonstration with one of the children, followed by a discussion and then practice of the practitioners among themselves of a specific idea taken from the demonstration
- In the afternoon, the children will arrive and each child will receive an FI from a practitioner. (A group of 3 practitioners will be assigned to each child, for the three days. Each day one practitioner of the group will give an FI to the child and the 2 others will observe). The practitioners will adapt the idea which has been practiced in the morning, to the specific abilities of their child. The trainers will support and supervise the practitioners.
- A summary discussion.
